the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 5.5 million to 7.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 16.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 9.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of older people, and to ensure that they are able to live independently and actively in the community. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of age-friendly communities, and the establishment of age-friendly networks. These initiatives aim to improve the quality of life of older people, and to ensure that they are able to live independently and actively in the community.

One of the key challenges in developing age-friendly communities is to ensure that the needs of older people are taken into account in the planning and development of the community. This includes ensuring that there are adequate facilities and services for older people, and that the community is accessible and inclusive for all ages.
