the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase by 1.5 billion (United Nations 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the 1990s. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been instrumental in this regard, and has produced a series of reports on the state of the world's children (UNICEF 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994). These reports have highlighted the need for a new approach to children's rights, one that is based on the principle of the best interests of the child.

The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) is a landmark document in this regard. It was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1989, and is the most widely ratified human rights treaty in the world. The UNCRC sets out the rights of children, and provides a framework for the development of national legislation and policies to protect and promote these rights.

The UNCRC is a comprehensive document, covering a wide range of issues, from the right to life, to the right to education, to the right to participate in decisions that affect them. It is a document that is based on the principle of the best interests of the child, and is designed to ensure that children are treated as individuals, with their own rights and needs.
